

The present invention provides recycling system of an aqueous paint in which number of required apparatuses or equipments can decrease when two or more aqueous paint having different paint colors are used in the recycling system for a same aqueous paint.

In the recycling system, over-spray paints are collected group by group according to a classification based on identity of combinations of pigments contained in said aqueous paints.